

SEANKELLY

Gottschalk, Molly. "Trending Artists Under 40 at Frieze London," Artsy, October 14, 2014.

Trending Artists Under 40 at Frieze London

Collectors, take your mark: Frieze London opens to the public tomorrow, and among over 1,000 artists being shown at the fair, we've identified the ten most popular artists under age 40 within Artsy's fair preview, based on pageviews. From Daniel Arsham, who will show a fossilized keyboard with Galerie Perrotin (not unlike the volcanic ash Casios he made with frequent collaborator Pharrell Williams), to Eddie Martinez, whose new solo show at Timothy Taylor Gallery helped ring in the start of Frieze week, we suspect the ten artists below will be ubiquitous this Frieze London—and thereafter.

Sun Xun
Palimpsestes II, 2014
ShanghAR

5. Sun Xun

Though usually recognized for his hand-drawn animations (he created the first Chinese animation to be shown at the Venice Film Festival), Beijing-based artist Sun Xun is also known for his drawings and installations. Sun was included in the Met's "Ink Art" exhibition last winter, and began this year with a solo exhibition at London's Hayward Gallery. On the heels of his solo exhibition at ShanghART's Singapore space, he'll show a work from his new "Palimpsestes" series at Frieze London, Palimpsestes II (2014), which was painted on the paper of an old Xinhua dictionary. This December, he'll get cozy with Sean Kelly Gallery: for his first exhibition the gallery, Sun will produce work in-house through the course of the show.