ARCHITECTURAL DIGEST

The 19 Best Art Exhibitions Opening in New York, Los Angeles, and London in 2016

Ilse D'Hollander, Sean Kelly, January 8–February 6 Ilse D'Hollander's beautiful small canvases, composed of soft, loose swaths of gentle hues, are at once soothing and unsettling: Each work is a composition of calmly distilled forms and irregular lines that add a sense of tension. With over 60 pieces, this show at Sean Kelly will be the first major U.S. exhibition of works by the Belgian artist, who died at the age of 29 in 1997 and who has only recently begun to garner the international appreciation her work is clearly due. Pictured here is an untitled piece from 1995.
