“Wide Wake”

Through December 16, 2017

Chicago-born emerging talent Sam Moyer's practice combines materials like hand-dyed fabric and marble slabs to create artworks that exist at the juncture between painting and sculpture. Her first solo exhibition at Sean Kelly gallery invites visitors to walk through a large architectural structure made of marble and steel, and be immersed in a series of pastel toned paintings that almost cover the height of the walls.

“Wide Wake” refers to her influences from artists such as David Smith to Eva Hesse. 475 10th Ave; skny.com
